

All was confusion. Strong shouts were laid upon him, which he did not resist. All he said was the truth, bursting from him in his horror and terror: "I did it! I did it!"

He was hurried off to prison, where he made a full confession of his crime, was tried and sentenced to death. But on the day before his execution he was found prone in his cell, disease of the heart had forestalled the execution.